FOREWORD

The National Institute of Corrections (NIC) is pleased to make available this Directory of Residential Community Corrections Facilities in the United States.

Since the 1970's, the public has observed the development of a broader array of sentencing options, changes in funding priorities, and modifications of sentencing philosophies. All of these changes have influenced the development and use of residential programming in corrections. However, there has been limited information documenting those changes.

No single description characterizes the range of residential programs within the community corrections field, nor does there exist any overview of available residential services. Such varied enterprises as a work-release program operated by a county sheriff or a state department of corrections, a restitution center administered through a regional corrections board, or a privately-operated halfway house funded with local United Way funds and federal contracts, though very different in goals and orientation, are all considered residential community corrections programs.

This directory is the first product of NIC's national survey of private and public residential community corrections programs. NIC sponsored the survey in an effort to obtain current data about the role of residential community corrections programs within the criminal justice system. The study identified and surveyed over 1,100 residential programs in an effort to better define the universe. This document describes the 641 facilities that responded to the survey and met each of four definitional criteria.

It is our hope that the directory will not only facilitate networking and help users identify referral sources, but will generally assist those citizens, policymakers, and criminal justice professionals who have expressed a need for more current information about residential community corrections.

M. Wayne Huggins
Director
National Institute of Corrections

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

The study that generated this directory has required the cooperative efforts of many individuals and organizations. The staff of this project want to recognize those whose support has been essential to completing the work.

Special thanks are given to all state departments of corrections staff and numerous probation and parole offices that provided information and assistance to develop the initial mailing list.

We are indebted to the organizations listed below that assisted in identifying potential respondents:

Volunteers of America, Salvation Army, Austin Wilkes Society, National Sheriffs Association, International Association of Residential and Community Alternatives (formerly International Halfway House Association), Federal Bureau of Prisons, American Jail Association, National Institute of Justice/National Criminal Justice Reference Service.

Numerous people offered support and guidance in developing the directory. The staff of this project are especially grateful to the following individuals who reviewed draft survey materials, provided input on data analysis and directory format issues, and generally supported staff efforts:

Richard Billak, Community Corrections, Inc.; Don Evans, American Probation and Parole Association; Vince Fallin, Georgia Department of Corrections; Den Freaney, Volunteers of America; Joseph Frye, Safer Foundation; Gail Funke, Ph.D., James Madison University; James A. Hemm, New Jersey Association on Correction; Peter Kinziger, International Association of Residential and Community Alternatives; Captain Ken Lane, Fairfax County Sheriff's Office; Larry Linke, Colorado Division of Criminal Justice; Ed McGarrell, Indiana University; Sheriff Richard K. Rainey, Contra Costa County Sheriff's Department; Bryan Riley, Massachusetts Halfway House, Inc.; A. Jeanne Russell, Ph.D., Oklahoma Department of Corrections; Rufus Thomas, Ohio Department of Youth Services; Neil Tilow, Talbert House; Tim Mahoney, Lycoming County (Pennsylvania) Prison; Bill Toney, Federal Bureau of Prisons; and Marvin Wiebe, Eclectic Communications, Inc.

We wish to offer special appreciation to Aspen staff: Vivian Workman, Administrative Coordinator; Marita Menaker, Senior Writer-Editor; Alice Evans, Network Coordinator; Sharon Starnes, Desktop Publishing Specialist; and Mark Jellison, Research Assistant.

Finally, we wish to thank NIC staff: George Keiser, Chief of Community Corrections; and Laura Schmitt, Program Manager, from the Community Corrections Division.

INTRODUCTION

The Directory of Residential Community Corrections Facilities in the United States has been sponsored by the National Institute of Corrections and designed as a reference guide to assist users in networking and identifying referral sources and programs of interest. The directory should prove useful to several user groups, including legislators, administrators, program managers, caseworkers, and researchers.

The information presented in this directory is the result of a national mail survey of residential community corrections facilities (RCCF's). The list of facilities surveyed was created by searching several sources including the American Correctional Association Juvenile and Adult Correctional Departments, Institutions, Agencies and Paroling Authorities Directory (1988); Association of Halfway House Alcoholism Program Directory (1986); state departments of corrections or probation and parole agencies; private organizations; and local sheriffs' offices in jurisdictions having a population over 100,000.

An RCCF was eligible to be included in the study if it: (1) housed adult offenders; (2) had at least 70 percent of its residents placed by federal, state, or local criminal justice authorities; (3) operated independently from the detention operation of a jail, prison, or other correctional institution; and (4) permitted clients to leave the premises during the day for work, education, or community programs. Questionnaires were mailed to approximately 1,100 administrators of RCCF's identified in this search as potentially meeting the study's definition. From the initial sample, 839 met all criteria in the definition. This directory is a compilation of the information provided by 641 facilities completing the questionnaire.

HOW TO USE THIS DIRECTORY

Order of Facility Profiles

The facility profile pages are presented alphabetically by the state in which they are located, and within each state they are alphabetically arranged by the city. When multiple facilities are found in a city, they are alphabetical by facility name.

Facility Profiles

Each facility profile consists of six sections in addition to the name and address of the facility and the facility director: the name and address of the operating agency, if applicable and available; the bed capacity of the facility; the offender types generally excluded from admission; the services regularly available to residents; referral types; and referral sources.

The information included in the facility profiles appears as reported by the survey respondents on a standard questionnaire, except when revisions were necessary for accuracy. Followup phone calls were made to collect missing information or to verify items that were unclear or contradictory. The potential responses available for each section are described in more detail below.

Operating Agency

The name and address of the operating agency or organization is presented if different from the facility name and address. If the RCCF listed no operating agency or organization, the section was left blank.

Operating Agency also indicates which of the following types of agencies or organizations operated the facility:

- Federal Government
- State Government
- County Government
- City Government
- Private, For Profit
- Private, Nonprofit

Current Bed Capacity

This section provides the total number of beds the facility indicated were available in the RCCF at the time of the survey, and then specifies the number of beds available at that time for men and women.

Offender Types Generally Excluded From Admission

Under this heading, offender types or characteristics generally excluded from admission to the facility are categorized as:

- Alcohol Abusers
- Arsonists
- Drug Abusers
- HIV Positive
- Medical Disorders
- Mentally Retarded
- Physically Disabled
- Psychiatric Disorders
- Sex Offenders
- Violent Offenders
- No Offender Types Excluded

Services Regularly Available to Residents

Types of services regularly available to residents are presented in this section. The services could be provided by any of a number of sources, including facility staff, service contract, or referral agreement to another agency. The categories of services are:

Educational Services

- GED/ABE preparation
- High school courses
- College courses
- English as a second language

Employment Services

- Employment counseling/placement
- Sheltered employment
- Vocational/skill training

Health Care

- Dental service
- Medical service
- Physical rehabilitation
